BIG SCHEME TO SELL WATER PLANTS TO THE STATE

Plan to Consolidate All Systems Around the Bay Under Public Ownership

It Was Worked Up Under Guise of Facilitating Bringing Water From Sierra Nevadas

SACRAMENTO, April 27.—By signing the Welch-Beatty municipal water district or consolidation bill Governor Gillett has cleared the way for the big scheme to consolidate all the water plants around the bay under public ownership and the management of a board appointed by the Governor. This scheme has been patterned after the system by which Boston and the nearby cities are supplied with water from a common source.

Under this system each city owns its own distributing plant and administers its own water system, but the water is derived by a supply owned by the state and administered by a state board of commissioners, who are empowered to buy and improve water rights and issue bonds therefor.

The Scheme of Consolidation

The new law provides for the organization of a municipal water district in which more than one city may join. The district will be controlled by a commission under which the development of the system for delivering the water to the several cities will be conducted. The distributing systems will be owned and controlled by the several cities and the water will be sold to their local consumers by the cities severally.

The district is given the right to acquire rights of way, easements, etc., by condemnation.

The bill was signed in the presence of Mayor Mott, City Attorney John W. Stetson, City Engineer Fred Turner, former Mayor William R. Davis and Special Engineer J. H. Dockweiler of Oakland, who, by special appointment, met the governor this afternoon to urge his approval of the bill which means so much to San Francisco and the transbay cities.

While the new law is merely enabling act of the outgrowth of a definite plan to consolidate the various water plants around the bay under public ownership, bonds being issued to buy the same. This plan has been under discussion for more than two years past, and has resolved its pursuit stage of development after careful study and clever manipulation.

Water Companies Desire to Sell

The scheme contemplates harmonizing the Spring Valley interest with the Hetch-Hetchy project. It contemplates the sale by the People's Water Company of the several distributing plants to the cities of Oakland, Berkeley, Alameda and Richmond, and the water supply and impounding works to the water district which it is proposed to organize. San Francisco is to take over Spring Valley distributing system while the water rights, reservoirs and conducting pipes are to go to the water district. Hetch-Hetchy is to be a reserve supply for the entire district, to be drawn on if necessary.

The scheme involves the issuance of bonds to a vast amount, from $75,000,000 to $100,000,000 at the outset. The purchase price of the plants of the Spring Valley and People's water companies are to be fixed by appraisement or by the compulsory process provided for in the new law.

Not a Hetch Hetchy Project

Those in control of Spring Valley and the People's water company are in favor of the scheme provided for in the bill and have had a finger in working out its details.

The law, which was framed by Dockweiler with Mayor Taylor and City Attorney Long of San Francisco and Mayor Mott and City Attorney McElroy of Oakland, ostensibly provides for the co-operation of other cities with San Francisco in bringing the Hetch-Hetchy water from the Sierra Nevada. In reality it provides a way for selling all the private plants now in existence around the bay to a water district and that was the chief object of the bill. Hetch-Hetchy was the stalking horse behind which it was pushed through the Legislature. It is not probably that Hetch-Hetchy water will be flowing in San Francisco and Oakland for some time to come.

Governor Gillett has added 25 per cent to the value of the real estate in every city on the Alameda side of the bay," was Dockweiler's delighted declaration as the governor affixed the signature which made the bill law, "and," continued Dockweiler, "he has opened the way for the development of the greatest and best municipal water system in the country. Now we can go to work, San Francisco and her sister cities working together. And together we can get this superb water supply without impairing our bond limitations."

All Carefully Figured Out

It has all been figured out that the existing plants can be taken over at a price satisfactory to their present owners and be made to pay interest on the investment and provide for a sinking fund without the expense of a dollar of public money. It would all be done with bonds which are to be paid off principal and interest from the proceeds of water sales. It is argued that relief from taxation and centralization management will greatly reduce the cost of operation and hence effect a gradual reduction in water rates. Each municipality in the district is to fix and collect its own water rates and administer its own system, paying the district so much per thousand gallons for the water it receives.

BABY KILLED AND MOTHER IS INJURED BY AUTO

Life Crushed Out by the Heavy Wheel of Machine

Two Women Passengers in Car Faint When Accident Occurs

SAN FRANCISCO, April 27.—Carrying in her arms her year and a half old son, Arthur, Mrs. Minnie Uecker, of 245 Richmond avenue, shortly after 10 o'clock this morning, was run down by a huge seven-seater Thomas Flyer on Market street in front of Hale Brothers' store, the baby being crushed to death beneath the large wheels of the car and the mother seriously injured.

Fred Brown, a public chauffeur of the Pioneer Auto Garage, was the driver of the machine. In the tonneau were Mrs. Maud Robinson and Mrs. Hazel Price, both of 45 South Hunter street, Stockton, but temporarily stopping at the Grand Central Hotel in this city.

Woman Confused

The two women had summoned the auto and were being driven about the city. They had just turned on to Market from Golden Gate avenue when Mrs. Uecker stopped from a street car and was about to cross the street to enter the store when the warning horn of the fast coming machine attracted her attention. At that time the baby Arthur was standing alone beside his mother, but at the first call of the auto's horn Mrs. Uecker clasped her child to her breast and started to cross the street. She took a few steps forward, then becoming frightened as the chauffeur again sounded his warning, started back again. Once more the horn of the auto sounded, and once more she crossed the street. She took a few steps forward, only to be knocked to the street away from the car, the shock carrying her baby from her grasp.

Women Faint

The child fell to the street directly in front of the automobile. In another moment the front wheel of the heavy machine crossed its tiny chest. Immediately a crowd gathered numbering thousands, but no one had the presence of mind to take the first step. Chauffeur Brown clutched his wheel, his face blanched, his eyes staring. Behind him sat his two passengers, both in a faint, and it was not until Lacroix, Hansen burst through the crowd that the spell was broken. Snatching the baby from the street he jumped into Brown's machine and gave the order to speed for the hospital. But his attempt to save the child's life was futile, for half of the distance to the hospital he was gasping in his arms the dead form of little Arthur.

The doctors had no sooner pronounced the child dead when a second auto arrived, bringing Mrs. Uecker. She was still senseless, but on administering a restorative she sat up and called piteously for her boy. As gently as could be done the sad news of the baby's death was broken to the mother. Almost before the doctor had finished his sentence the mother seemed to realize the awful fact and the shriek which issued from her mouth, murmuring at intervals, "Oh, my baby, my baby boy."

Geoffrey Uecker, the father of the dead boy, is employed as a cement worker on the new Palace Hotel building. The news was conveyed to him over the telephone, and he immediately called at the hospital and had his wife conveyed to their home. Brown, the chauffeur, has been charged with the custody of the machine with a manslaughter, pending the arrival of his employer with the necessary bail, he is being detained at the prison.

Brave Youths Rescue Two Girls From Death When Boat Upsets

MISS ANITA SPANER. MISS A. SCHNUTEN HAUS.

The yacht excursion given Sunday to the Contra Costa Club had a somewhat interesting ending when Miss Adele Schmuttenhaus, daughter of Mrs. Max Schmuttenhaus, of 974 Thirtieth street, and her friend Miss Anita Spaner of San Francisco, who were guests of the club, narrowly escaped drowning. The accident occurred when the party was midway between Alcatraz Island and S. Camp.

Skiff Overtaken

Four of the party, Miss Schmuttenhaus, Miss Spaner, Florence Clancy and William Miller, started to enter the skiff before the yacht, when it overturned, throwing them in the bay. Miss Schmuttenhaus and Miss Spaner were supported by Miss Clancy and Mr. Miller until they were rescued.

Ellsworth in Favor of Municipal Ownership of Paving Apparatus

WANTS CITY TO OWN ASPHALT PLANT

Councilman Ellsworth Believes It Would Be Profitable to Oakland

SAN FRANCISCO SAVES 20 PER CENT OF COST

Municipal Ownership Proves of Great Benefit to Tax-Payers Across Bay

Councilman Oliver Ellsworth, chairman of the finance committee of the City Council, at a meeting of that body last night read a communication from C. A. Day of the board of Public Works of San Francisco showing that in that city municipal ownership of the asphalt plant is saving at least 20 per cent of the cost of repaving streets by owning and operating its own asphalt plant.

"Mr. Day informs me," said Ellsworth, "that if Oakland had owned its plant the cost would have been between $6000 and $7000 in the repaving of Broadway. In the first place we could have saved much time. When holes or depressions appear in a road they are not repaired until it is necessary to close the street. I think the matter of a municipally owned plant is of vital importance. I will take the matter up in committee."

In the communication from Mr. Day it was set forth that the only San Francisco plant had cost more than $100,000. Of this sum $10,000 was for the plant proper and $90,000 for rollers. The capacity of the San Francisco plant is 10,000 square feet in a day of eight hours work.

DIES ON WAY TO HIS BIRTHPLACE

Thomas R. Turner, Once Owner of Tichau Tavern, Passes Away in England

SAN FRANCISCO, April 27.—Thomas R. Turner, for many years a resident of this city and a bit of a local celebrity, died at Liverpool, England, on Sunday, April 26, having been on his way to his birthplace.

Turner and his family were on their way to Lancashire, England, his birthplace, and had been in the city for some time. He was a well-known local figure and had been in the city for some time.

Patent Brought Fortune

Upon his arrival in San Francisco more than twenty years ago, Mr. Turner obtained employment in the Pacific Coast Steamship Company, later becoming purchasing agent and port steward of the company. During the Spanish-American war Mr. Turner invented a folding bunk for use on army transports, which was adopted by the War Department and which brought him a fortune.

Turner and Captain John J. O'Connor of this city with whom he was associated in various enterprises were at one time the principal owners of the Tichau Tavern.

Deceased was a member of San Mateo Lodge No. 111, B. P. O. E. 111.

His family is expected to arrive in San Francisco today with the body, which will be in state at the Elks lodge room there until Thursday when the funeral will be held. A solemn requiem high mass at St. Matthews' Church will precede the interment at Holy Cross cemetery.

Western Pacific Asks for Freight Track Franchise

The Western Pacific Railway, which, within sixty days it is reported, will have passenger trains running in and out of Oakland, made application to the City Council last night for a franchise to lay freight tracks on Third street between Oak and Harrison streets. The passenger depot will be at Third and Harrison streets. The distributing point of freight will be at Third and Harrison streets.

Attorney Charles E. Snook appeared on behalf of the Western Pacific, stating that the company had secured more than the consent of the necessary two-thirds of the property owners. The freight yards will occupy about one half of the block in low Third street, between Oak and Harrison streets. The company having purchased the land outright.

In the ordinance granting the franchise it is expressly stated that the company shall not allow any of its cars to block the cross streets. The term of the franchise asked for is forty-nine years and six months.

The entire matter was referred to the railroad committee.

Neighbors Complain That Drunken and Vulgar Men Live in It

A communication requesting that the building known as the "Bachelors' Home" and also the "Bachelors' Home" at 607 Fourth street be declared a nuisance and be torn down was presented to the City Council last night by property owners in the immediate vicinity. Henry W. Fanger, D. F. Morgan, S. Cole and Mrs. O. W. Peterson headed the list of complainants.

According to them the "Bachelors' Home" is a disgraceful and a nuisance. It is occupied by drunken and vulgar men who live in it. They are a disgrace to the city and their presence is a nuisance to the neighborhood.

The communication was referred to the Board of Health for an advisory opinion.

MELLO LICENSE BRINGS OUT CHARGES

Protestants Angered at Action of City Council Pass Resolutions of Protest

NO TRUTH IN ACCUSATION DECLARES COBBLEDICK

Statements As Published Are Not According to Facts in the Case

Councilman L. M. Cobbledick of the Seventh ward in East Oakland is very much annoyed at the charges made by William Mullens, publisher, horse dealer and president of the Church Temperance League, Dr. T. H. Holmes and others, that a liquor license was granted to Mullens. Cobbledick contends that the license was granted without permitting about 200 protestants to voice their sentiments at a meeting of the Council.

In reference to all of the statements Councilman Cobbledick says: "There is no truth in the statement that the license was granted in payment of a campaign debt. As a matter of fact, no vote was cast for the granting of the license. I understand that there has been a statement made that three of the councilmen who voted against granting the license would have fallen in line if their votes were needed. This is a deliberate falsehood."

"The protestants had ample opportunity to appear before the Council committee. There is no record of any protest heard and not on the Council floor. I have never made promises to Mello Brothers in my life relative to their license either before or after election."

Mullens' Protest

The following communication to THE TRIBUNE gives the version of Mullens and his fellow protestants: A mass meeting of citizens was held on Sunday afternoon at the Twenty-third Avenue Church, East Oakland, for the purpose of protesting against the recent action of the Council in granting the license to Mullens. The meeting was held in the evening at the Twenty-third Avenue Church and drawing to about 200 citizens. The city ordinance provides that no license shall be granted until the request of the people of the district has been secured. The city charter provides that no license shall be granted until the request of the people of the district has been secured."

Wilson was about to enter his home when he was confronted by a man who thrust a revolver in Wilson's face and ordered him to throw up his hands.

A passing pedestrian caused the hold-up man to take fright and he took to his heels. Wilson, notified Policeman Blunk, but was so frightened that he could not tell the officer the number of his house. After some search the house was found, but after Blunk had made a thorough investigation, the premises were found to be empty, and the man was compelled to give up, as the thief had made his escape.

BYSTANDER SHOT BY POLICEMAN

Fires at Fleeing Prisoner and Brings Down the Wrong Man

In an attempt to stop a fleeing prisoner by shooting at him, Policeman Longnecker last night shot and wounded John Burke, of 1205 Market street. Burke was not seriously injured, the bullet passing between the bones in the lower part of his leg.

Longnecker had arrested Charles Johnson, of the St. Clement lodging house at Fourth and Polson streets, San Francisco, on suspicion. While taking him to a patrol box, Johnson broke away and ran. Burke was thrown away a small girl. The suspicious action led Longnecker to fire two shots in the air in an effort to halt Johnson, who either mistook the shots for those fired by the police.

A third shot fired directly at Johnson missed him and struck Burke, who had been visiting at the home of Dr. D. J. Lynch at 1725 Market street. It was found that his grip contained postcards which he had been peddling. He was booked on a charge of violating the peddlers' ordinance.

'Big Jim's' Fearful Revenge.

To the great surprise of the public generally, it has been demonstrated that Hon. James L. Gallagher, sometimes irreverently referred to as "Big Jim," and sometimes even more coarsely designated as the chief hatchetman of the graft crusade, can be insulted. That worthy citizen has heretofore been considered immune from a sense of shame and hide-proof to scorn and contempt.

But it appears that the Hon. Big Jim is still subject to the human weakness of mortification. He has feelings, or occasionally has them, that can be touched, wounded, wronged even. Psychologists will note that while "Big Jim" may be destitute of a conscience, he nevertheless retains the ability to feel. Sensitiveness has lingered after pride, honor and self-respect have departed.

There is hope for "Big Jim" yet. A man who can be guilty of as many crimes as "Big Jim" confesses to with a feeling of conscious virtue, perjury, bribery, betrayal of public and private trust, treachery to every obligation usually held sacred among men, and yet be capable of growing indignant at insult is no ordinary person. His honor may be regarded as beneath the contempt of thieves, but that contempt should have power to kindle resentment and indignation in his manly bosom is surely a wonder. That a man may be dead so far as heart, honor and conscience are concerned and still possess the sensation of feeling is truly wonderful. The cheerful alacrity with which "Big Jim" took up the trade of bribe broker, and the thrift with which he "pinched" the graft he distributed among his co-workers in the cause of civic reform, would naturally lead one to believe him impervious to the slings and arrows of popular loathing. Even the fees he charged for collecting the wages of infamy did not deprive him of emotion nor fortify him against insult. It seems that utter lack of moral sense and moral sensation does not render one entirely incapable of being wounded. "Big Jim's" pride can be hurt even if it is dead. What a fate must be his! To be incapable of realizing the depths of his dishonor and yet able to feel the scorching derision that is felt for him. To be unconscious of deserving reproach yet feeling in his very marrow the loathing of all mankind!

But when "Big Jim" feels insulted he knows how to make the punishment fit the crime. Miles Na Coppalcan gave Mr. Hardress Cregan the scorn and contempt of a rogue. "Big Jim" goes him several better. He spat on a reporter who offended him by speaking in disrespectful terms of his performance as a witness. In all ages being spat upon has been regarded as the crowning indignity. To be spat upon by "Big Jim" Gallagher is to have all other forms of insult and revenge crowded into one. In one sense, at least, "Big Jim" appreciates the feeling he inspires in the mass of mankind. By voiding his rheum on the reporter he testified that he realizes the pinnacle of infamy he occupies in public estimation. He did his worst. He took the revenge of a pole cat, begging the skunk's pardon for the comparison. Let him be ever so shameless the knowledge that he is the dirtiest rogue ever thrown on the offal heap is in a sense a vindication of the law of compensation.

Sane Outdoor Athletics.

Outdoor athletics when conducted on sane lines are deserving of every encouragement, for, whatever they may be, they help to develop some physical or mental human quality which builds up the race. But all such athletics have well-defined limitations. There is a limit to human endurance which must be considered. Whenever the form of outdoor athletics oversteps that limitation it destroys its purpose and becomes an unmitigated evil. No country on the face of the globe is so disposed to go to the extreme in that respect as the United States. Otherwise healthful sports, when carried on immoderately, do more harm than good, and the popular tendency is to cross the limit of sanity.

Intercollegiate football met its Waterloo because of the insane extreme to which it was carried, violating all the rules of prudence in the insane desire to excel at every sacrifice to life and limb and the reasonable capacity of human endurance. Now the Marathon long distance foot-racing craze has entered on the same course. It is like the craze which swept over the country a quarter of a century ago or more for running five hundred miles against six days' time, and it is producing the same results. It is making mental and physical wrecks out of men of naturally athletic build, without any useful purpose. The gambling element in the national organism and those who delight, without reason, in extraordinary feats of endurance regardless of the suffering of those displaying it, encourage it. But it is none the less inconsiderate, insane and brutal. And the sober public judgment is beginning to be aroused against the brutality and senselessness of the Marathon races, as it was aroused against the old time five-hundred-mile foot-races in six days' continuous running and the brutalities committed on the intercollegiate football field in the past. Sane outdoor athletics should receive all popular encouragement, but popular opinion should frown down on every form of outdoor athletic sport that subjects the participant to tests of physical and human endurance which are on their face beyond ordinary human capacity.

The sudden collapse of the Patten wheat corner in the Chicago "pit" is a complete vindication of the United States Agricultural Department, for the corner was based on the false representations made by Patten and his gambler associates that Secretary Wilson was wrong in his figures regarding the supply of 1908 wheat in the granaries of the country and the acreage and condition of the area sown in wheat in 1909. The usual result of such a speculative corner has occurred in this case. Wheat has been pouring in to Chicago from all quarters of the country, showing an abundant supply on hand, and that a prospective famine was not even a remote possibility, while the area sown for this year's crop is infinitely beyond the Patten estimates and gives ample security for the coming year's breadstuff necessities. Patten reaped a rich financial harvest from the scare he artificially created; but like others who have acquired similar ill-gotten gains he is surely doomed to the same fate as his predecessors in the game they experienced—that is, eventually to go broke, as he richly deserves to do. Such men may fool some of the people some of the time, but they cannot fool all the people all the time.

Fresno is taking the lead and appropriating all of the advertising that is coming to it through the booming of "Raisin Day" next Friday. But the fact should not be overlooked that Tulare, San Joaquin, Yolo and other counties in the State are large producers of raisins also and they are entitled to a share of the benefits of the advertising.

Territorial Aerial Invasion.

Recent aerial voyages across the Franco-German border by German balloons have raised a new question affecting international rights. All nations contiguous to one another are particularly jealous of military encroachment on their respective frontiers. For example: In the various Apache uprisings, United States troops were compelled to halt at the Mexican border and give up the chase when the renegades crossed it to seek refuge in its mountain fastnesses until driven back by the Mexican rurales. In the later campaign against Cochise and Geronimo the two governments reached an agreement whereby the entry of United States cavalry into Mexican territory in the round-up of the Apache hostiles was not construable as an invasion. It was through this friendly co-operative arrangement that the Apaches were finally subdued.

If a German military force were to cross the French frontier and enter French territory, it would be just cause for the French government to demand an explanation and an apology from Berlin. No German, civilian or military, would be permitted to cross the frontier into France to take topographical observation of the country. Any German detected sketching the location, approaches to, and surroundings of French frontier fortifications would be promptly arrested as a spy or escorted under a military guard across the line, after seizing his sketches. Nor would the German government tolerate, on the other hand, any similar invasion and espionage of its territory by the French.

The question naturally arises, therefore—can the crossing of an international frontier by a dirigible balloon navigating the air for purposes of military observation be tolerated in time of peace without being made the basis for a valid protest against the offending government on the ground that an excursion over prohibited territory in the air is equivalent to an actual military trespass or invasion of the soil? Some such question has undoubtedly become a subject of consideration by the French government owing to recent excursions made by German military balloons across the frontier into French territory, as is indicated by the order issued by the French minister of war to seize German balloons landing on French soil and hold the same until customs duties shall have been paid.

As the Germans have paid no attention to the action taken by the minister of war, but have continued their system of military espionage by crossing the eastern frontier and circling over French forts and territory as far as Rheims, the French government will in all probability make diplomatic representations to the German government which will bring the whole question of the right of aerial invasion in time of peace to a focus. It is not improbable, moreover, that the right of one nation's subjects to cross the border into the territory of its neighbor in the air except during time of war will become the subject of international consideration and will result ultimately in the formulation of a well-defined international law. As it is the employment of dirigible balloons as the German army authorities are employing them on the Franco-German frontier practically obliterates the boundary line between the two countries, for it does not seem possible to maintain a military patrol of the boundary in the air as it is now maintained on the solid ground.

Curious Fish Law Juggle.

The revision of the fish and game laws by the Legislature at its last session has produced some queer incongruities, which the Cloverdale Reveille says have been giving trouble to the people of Sonoma and Mendocino counties. Under the revised laws, it is lawful to capture and sell steelhead trout in April, but the capture and sale of trout is prohibited before May 1st. Anglers who have been whipping the streams of the counties named for steelheads have been taking other varieties of trout in violation of the law. In many cases it was doubtless impossible to return the forbidden fish to the water alive and their captors retained them on the plea of not knowing the difference between steelheads and other kinds of trout. The Reveille says the Fish Commissioners have cut the Gordian knot by advising fishermen to call them all steelheads. On this subject the Arcata Union says:

"Owing to the fact that our fish laws governing the open season on trout seem to be badly mixed, Chief Deputy Charles Vogelsang has come to our rescue and tells us how one may catch trout (though unlawful to do so), before May 1st, without being arrested for violating this very much tangled question. Mr. Vogelsang simply requests all fishermen who catch trout in coast streams before May 1st to call them steelheads, even if they know they are trout. As a matter of fact there are some three distinct species of trout in the streams of Humboldt county on which the season, according to the new State law, does not open until May 1st, but the average sportsman is not able to distinguish the difference between them and steelheads, and the officials will not cause trouble if a few of the species other than steelhead find their way into the fishermen's baskets."

The incident shows to what contradictory conditions juggling with the fish and game laws has brought them and to what subtleties the Fish Commission has been compelled to resort to harmonize them. It is a shockingly poor law that requires the chief agent of the commission to deliberately recommend the violation of one section by the falsification of the results obtained in the exercise of lawful rights conferred by another section.

San Francisco has employed Rudolph Hering to draw plans for a new incinerator and a sewer system. Hering was the engineer who devised a system of drainage for the city of Memphis which formed the basis for ridding that city of the yellow fever plague. Twenty years ago he visited California and laid out sanitary sewer systems for Los Angeles and other cities in the southland. At that time he was employed to devise a main drainage system for Oakland which provided for the discharge of the sewage of East Oakland and all of the territory west of Lake Merritt and the north arm of the estuary whose natural drainage is to the south, into San Francisco bay, and was paid a fee of $1000 for his report. The latter was heartily approved by the best local engineers of the time, and two acres of land above the low tide line on the West Oakland flats for a pumping plant station was bought from the Oakland Water Front Company. The city still owns the two acres and Hering's report reposes among the municipal archives; but nothing was ever done to carry out his system for disposing of the city's sewage.

THE DEAR DEAD THINGS OF THE PAST

EDITOR TRIBUNE: A poet pathetically asks "where are the girls of yester year?" We answer, they're gone, gone with the boys who used to grease their hair with bear oil scented with bergamot, gone with the old ladies who used to wear sunbonnets with pouter-birds in them, and who assuaged their apple pie with allspice.

Gone with the old-fashioned people who poured their tea in a saucer and blew it to cool it.

Gone with the old ladies who gave catnip tea to the babies to cure colic.

Gone with the old-time little girls who wore long pantalettes made of nankeen with frills on the bottom.

Gone with the bootjack and the candle-snuffers.

Gone with the old farmer who wore barn-door trousers and greased their boots on Sunday mornings.

Gone with the watch-guard with a brass watch kept fastened to it.

Gone with the linen duster and the linen trousers that were lined with unbleached muslin.

Gone with the old flat carpet sack.

Gone with the old ladies who baked little custards for tea when they had company and ornamented the edges of the plate with a thimble to make them look gay.

Gone with the shot-bag money purse and the Shaker bonnets. Gone, gone forever from the earth. Alas! and can it be?

NOTE AND EXCERPT

French proverb: The fool wanders the morning cup of tea that is in disfavor. It is admitted that this institution is a source of comfort and refreshment to a good many persons when the mental and physical faculties are in a more or less lethargic state, and, that being so, the Lancet is probably quite right in asserting that "it is superfluous for physiology and chemistry to preach that the practice may be beset with troubles connected more or less with the gastric machine."

TOLD YEARS AGO OF THEFTS, HE CONFESSES

Million Dollar Forger Says Two Financiers Knew of His Crimes
CRIMINAL FOR TWENTY YEARS, HE DECLARES
Tears Fill Eyes of Prisoner As Wife Is Mentioned in Court

CHICAGO, April 27.—Peter Van Vliessen, whose confession last winter to the forgery of mortgages to the extent of $1,000,000 caused a great sensation in Chicago, exploded a bomb-shell in the bankruptcy court today when he stated that his confession a few months ago was ante-dated by four years by a confession made privately to men who held $100,000 of his spurious paper.

Van Vliessen was brought back to Chicago from prison today to testify before the referee in bankruptcy, Frank L. Woon who is attempting to locate the valid assets of the prisoner. Van Vliessen made a declaration that in 1904 he was compelled to confess to Maurice Rosenfeld, then a director of the new defunct Chicago National Bank and Bernard Rosenberg a real estate dealer, that the mortgages held by the two and valued at $400,000 had been forged.

Face Pale
Van Vliessen's face was pale and his hands trembled as he told his story on the witness stand today. His eyes were bloodshot and his lips twitched as he faced counsel and recognized former friends among the spectators in the crowded court room.

A resolution offered by Judge Carroll Cook of San Francisco permitting parlors of the order to serve California wines and liquors at their receptions and banquets was voted down by a decisive majority.

A resolution to establish a home for homeless children of the order in San Francisco, has been presented by Carroll Cook. A home site for indigent members at Placerville was also tendered.

The latest proposition is to found a home for boys under 18. It is believed that this will serve several good purposes and it has many supporters. District Attorneys Langdon and Hanly are here. Langdon has been frozen out of the office of grand trustee. The delegates are unfriendly to him.

Beverly L. Hodgehead's Name Appears as the Attorney for the Western Union Telegraph Company in a Suit Filed in the Superior Court

HAS NO CONTRACT WITH COMPANY, SO HE SAYS HE IS NOT IN ITS EMPLOY

Forced to Answer Question Put by Voter

SAN FRANCISCO, April 27.—The name of Beverly L. Hodgehead appears as attorney for the Western Union Telegraph Company in the transcript of appeal just filed in the Supreme Court of the state. The case is entitled Union Construction Company vs. Western Union Telegraph Company, and the case was tried in Tuolumne county. All through the record the name of Beverly L. Hodgehead appears as attorney for the Western Union Telegraph Company.

BERKELEY, April 27.—An audience of forty-three made up of candidates and auditors comprised the meeting at the church at the corner of Lincoln and Edith streets last evening.

Max Thelen, a law clerk for the Western Pacific, took the floor and spoke in glowing terms of the new charter, with reference to the opportunity it gives the public to select good men to fill the offices of municipal government. He recommended Hodgehead for the office of mayor because, as he said, he is a good man and helps to finance the charter. Walter Burke, ex-chairman, and called upon to nominate Robert Hoedel as the first speaker. He said:

"I am a young man and would like to have a chance to climb. I am specially qualified for the office. Give a young man a chance."

E. B. Norton, candidate for councilman, read a number of clauses from the charter with reference to the duties of various municipal officers, and then, upon the importance of selecting good men, he said:

"I have lived here twenty-eight years, and I have been faithful and discharged my duties right. I feel that you ought to vote for me."

Hodgehead and the Charter

Hodgehead was then called upon. "I think the issue is not a very fair one," he said. "The struggle of the present is a continuation of a year or more past during the efforts to secure a new charter. We have now simply reached the end stage of the charter."

As to Western Union

After Hodgehead had finished speaking, Fred Clark of 1625 Grant street, arose and asked if it were true that he was an attorney for the Western Union telegraph company. He said:

"Some two or three years ago, I was employed by the Western Union Telegraph company," replied Hodgehead. "I sometimes try cases for the Western Union company, and if anyone tells that I am an attorney for the company, I want him to vote against me. There is nothing in the form of a contract, and in that sense I don't suppose you could consider me as an attorney for the company."

Among other things, a man who spoke was Mr. J. Young.

BERKELEY, April 27.—Professor B. C. Moses, who returned yesterday after a year of absence in Europe and South America, announced that he is about to write another volume of his "South American" series. The volume will deal with the political and economic conditions of the South American countries during the sixteenth and seventeenth centuries.

Progress in South

Professor Moses speaks glowingly of the progress the Latin American republics are making.

"There were ten delegates to the congress from the United States," said Professor Moses. "The delegates from the United States were the only ones who had not been to the congress before."

"The thing that interested me most about my visit to France was the strike of the postal and telegraph employees," said Professor Moses. "It was a very interesting thing to see."

HEART—TRIBUNE'S PAGE FOR WOMEN—HOME

MISS CARNEGIE IS BEING BROUGHT UP IN THE MOST SIMPLE MANNER

12-Year-Old Heiress, to $100,000,000

NEW YORK.—Being trained to inherit a hundred millions.

Such is the lot of a wholesome-looking, unaffected little girl of twelve years, whom you might have passed almost any day in Central Park, New York, feeding squirrels or tossing bits of bread to the swans. You would never dream that she would inherit one million, let alone a hundred. But that is because she is Margaret, daughter of Andrew Carnegie, who adds to the high ideals of his wife, his own practical ideas of education for a great trust.

The keystone on which Mr. and Mrs. Carnegie are building the education and training of their daughter, according to a kinswoman and intimate family friend, is the necessity of preserving at any cost and sacrifice, the child's natural capacity for finding happiness in very simple things. It is their belief that the joy of childhood should not depend upon formal pleasures, and concrete amusements, that it should not be affected by either the abundance or the absence of toys and games; that dress and personal luxuries should be matters of indifference. And finally, the child should find its supreme happiness in the mere joy of living, in the innocent realization that it is alive.

No one should think from this outline of Margaret Carnegie's training that she lives an austere life or has not every modern convenience and comfort at her command. It is simply that love of luxury is no part of her curriculum.

The average child born to the golden spoon is taught that her father's money will smooth all the rough places out of her pathway, and buy her whatever her heart desires. Money, to her, represents merely a means of satisfying her nobility or magnanimity of conduct or dignity.

"Noblesse oblige." It is not written on the nursery walls in the Carnegie home on Fifth avenue, but it is lived and preached by all to whom education and training of the little Margaret is entrusted. This one lofty principle must be hers, that whatever she has, which other less fortunate little girls have not is hers only as she may make of it an instrument for the happiness of others.

The average nursery in a millionaire's home is cluttered with expensive toys. Little girls and princesses are taken to great toy shops by relatives or governesses and permitted to pick and choose without question of price. No so in the Carnegie nursery. Here toys are of the simplest and best expensive sort, coming at such infrequent intervals that they have never been a surfeit, just fresh joy in each new gift.

The kinswoman who has so often heard Mr. Carnegie expound his theories of child-culture, tells this interesting story of Margaret Carnegie's every-day life. When she was six years old, she received her first pair of "shiny" shoes, made from patent leather. Living, as she had, in a modern palace, attended by vigilant nurses and tutors, this little girl had never possessed anything quite so gorgeous as these shiny shoes. No wonder, therefore, that she was so delighted with them. When she was eight years old, she received her first pair of "shiny" shoes, made from patent leather. Living, as she had, in a modern palace, attended by vigilant nurses and tutors, this little girl had never possessed anything quite so gorgeous as these shiny shoes. No wonder, therefore, that she was so delighted with them.

At first her father was greatly amused at her keen delight, but gradually his amusement turned to displeasure as he saw the possibilities of one pair of shoes overturning all his educational theories. For Margaret, walking in the Park with her distinguished parent, stopped every few paces to admire the wonderful shoes and to often say she thought it necessary to lean over and dust invisible specks from the tips with her pocket handkerchief. All of which goes to prove that the arrival of a pair of "shiny" shoes was an event in her well-ordered and frugal life.

This simplicity prevails in her entire wardrobe. The arrival of a new frock in the Carnegie nursery has always been an event. Not being surfeited with handsome expensive clothing, like any wholesome and happy girl, the heiress of millions finds her cup of happiness overflowing at sight of a new frock, without reference to its intrinsic value.

This is due not entirely to Scotch thrift and frugality on Papa Carnegie's part. Just as in the royal nurseries of Europe future kings and queens must be fitted at an early age with a sense of responsibility for the subjects they may some day rule, so does the Laird of Skibo and the industrial monarch desire to prepare his heiress to administer the vast fortune which will involve directly and indirectly the welfare and happiness of so many people.

Marital Tangle of Young Boyce Cut by Divorce

MIDDLETOWN, N. Y., April 27.—A remarkable divorce case has been brought to an end by the granting by Supreme Court Justice Morschauer of a decree to Hubert R. Boyce, a young man of high standing in this city.

His wife, Avis Collins Martin Boyce, is now living in Atlanta, and at the final hearing evidence was introduced showing that Mrs. Boyce had married Dr. George L. Brown, of Atlanta, a noted throat specialist in the South and a Georgia State Senator.

During his travels as a traveling salesman for Brown & Co., of New York, Boyce, brought an introduction by a business friend, met Miss Avis Collins Martin, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Melville C. Martin, of No. 64 Hill street, Atlanta. She was a very attractive young woman, who for some years had been first soprano in the choir of Emmanuel Baptist Church there.

A rapid courtship followed, and on Nov. 22, 1904, while Miss Martin was visiting her sister, Mrs. F. H. Rounsaville, at Ninety-fourth street and Riverside Drive, New York, they were married by the Rev. William T. Manning, of Trinity Parish. After a wedding trip to Cuba they made their home with Mr. Boyce's parents in Liberty street, this city.

Scurrilous Letters Sent

In July, 1905, Mrs. Boyce went to Atlanta to visit her parents. Soon after Mr. Boyce began to receive letters from Atlanta signed by Dr. George Brown. The writer said he had known Avis Martin since she was a little girl and made statements concerning her character that were almost sufficient to drive Mr. Boyce insane.

Dr. Brown wrote dozens of letters, apparently for the purpose of humiliating Mr. Boyce and causing trouble between him and his wife. These letters were addressed in various ways, the envelope of one bearing the inscription:

"Col. Hubert R. Boyce, the Easy Mark, No. 43 Liberty street, Middletown, N. Y."

News next came from Atlanta that Mrs. Boyce had instituted proceedings for a divorce. This was done in letters by Mrs. Boyce and affirmed by Dr. Brown.

Matters were in abeyance for a long time, but in the fall of 1907 Mr. Boyce's attorneys received newspapers from Atlanta containing a picture of "Miss Avis Martin" and the announcement of her engagement to Dr. George Brown. Later came clippings which stated that "Miss Avis Martin, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Melville C. Martin, of No. 64 Hill street, Atlanta, had been married on Tuesday evening, Jan. 25, 1908, at 9 o'clock to Dr. George Brown, by the Rev. W. W. Beardsfield."

The papers also said that Dr. Brown and his bride went on a wedding trip to Mexico and were the guests of President Diaz.

A prominent resident of this city, a friend of Boyce's, went to Atlanta and found that Dr. Brown and Mrs. Boyce were living together as man and wife, but considerable difficulty was experienced in getting papers served in the divorce action. Dr. Brown had the reputation of carrying large caliber revolvers, and it was said he would shoot on sight; therefore Atlanta process servers did not care for the job. But the papers were finally served.

During the investigation it was found that Mrs. Boyce had obtained a divorce in Atlanta which Boyce's attorneys claimed was illegal, as neither Mr. Boyce nor his attorney was served with notice of the action.

HIS WIFE JEALOUS OF VESTA VICTORIA

BOSTON, April 27.—Juna Vassar, actress, who appeared in the New York Hippodrome last season, testified today in the divorce suit she has brought against Allan V. Hale, of Boston, on the grounds of cruel and abusive treatment. Mrs. Hale said to Judge Fox: "I am 12 years old. My maiden name was Juna Fernie Gould. My father is W. M. Gould of No. 2 Foster street, Everett. I was married on October 15, 1907, to Allan V. Hale, a Boston theatrical man, at the Hotel Bellevue. Two weeks after our wedding, while at the Hotel Regent in Washington, he had a quarrel. My husband struck me on the face. "Three weeks later he hit me as I lay in bed. A few nights later he hit me again and I ran into mother's room. I was forced to leave him in February, 1908. I was forced to go to work. I got an engagement in a Boston stage production. He threatened to kill me." Mr. Hale said in substance: "I never hit my wife in my life. The trouble started when she found in my pocket a bill for a dress for Miss Vesta Victoria, an actress. I had taken the bill from Miss Victoria's husband to pay for him. My wife got jealous. I love her. She cares for me. If it were not for her father we would be living together."

Judge Fox continued the case indefinitely, saying: "Mr. Hale has a strong affection for his wife. To grant a divorce would be to make a jest of the marriage ceremony. I hope the couple will try to live together again."

Vesta Victoria is in Europe.

LA MANOLA

A face of pink and nacker! Tiger eyes,
Fringed by long, silken lashes black as jet!
A tortoise-comb high in soft tresses set,
A fan in hand of Oriental dyes,

Screening delicious spheres that fall and rise
Draped in a frail mantilla's gauzy net.
A satin slipper on a foot that vies
With Castile's Queen, and which will quickly fret

When, near the Prado, sounds of castagnette
Of some great revelry or dance apprise.
A vague, strange look of passion you surmise,
You catch a pleasant scent like mignonette!
She passes!—while from sensuous lips there flies
The blue smoke of her twisted cigarette!

—Francis S. Saltus.

Middletown Man Free at Last From Wife Who Left Him and Wedded Physician

At first her father was greatly amused at her keen delight, but gradually his amusement turned to displeasure as he saw the possibilities of one pair of shoes overturning all his educational theories. For Margaret, walking in the Park with her distinguished parent, stopped every few paces to admire the wonderful shoes and to often say she thought it necessary to lean over and dust invisible specks from the tips with her pocket handkerchief. All of which goes to prove that the arrival of a pair of "shiny" shoes was an event in her well-ordered and frugal life.

Ouida's Dog Puck Now Owned by Sculptor

NEW YORK, April 27.—When Ouida, the novelist, was found dead, crouched upon her breast, with muzzle pressed close to the heart forever stilled, lay Titania, one of the several dog comrades who had shared her riches and her poverty, and in this last extremity kept guard.

Millie De la Hume died at Vinareggio, Italy, in February, 1908, and Titania became a rover. The alert head, the brown, sensitive eyes of the spaniel, her human capacity for devotion, brought her finally into the keeping of one of the captains of the Anchor line service, and since that day, when she was torn from the body of her dead mistress, she has led a seafaring life, traveling from New York to the Mediterranean ports and on to Glasgow.

Miss Josephine Shilling Tells How She Got Her Innocent Brother Out of Prison

NEW YORK, April 27.—Miss Josephine Shilling, 17, with blue eyes, long curls and a pink costume, whose porpoise grace in demanding the release of her brother, Frank Shilling, from a Jungoon in the prison of San Juan de Ulua, in the harbor of Vera Cruz, Mexico, has attracted international attention, returned home on the Ward liner Merida yesterday.

Miss Shilling was a student in the Holy Cross academy, in this city. Her brother, a tobaccoist of Odenburg, N. Y., was in Vera Cruz on business in January, 1907, when he was accused of having been one of three Americans who robbed Raulo Rodriguez of $2700. He was thrown into San Juan de Ulua, kept incommunicado and not permitted to write letters. Last summer he smuggled out a letter which informed his sister of his plight, and she went to Vera Cruz.

Spent Eight Months and $1000

The Mexican officials wouldn't let her see her brother. They pretended not to understand. She did see him, through bribery. Then she set to work to learn Spanish. In three months she could speak the language. She retained a lawyer named Zenora to help her, and had interviews with Judge William Cabrera. It took $1000 in gold, eight months of Shilling's time and the assistance of the Department of State to liberate young Shilling.

"The word manana should appear on the Mexican flag," said the girl. "It could be stamped on the Mexican coin. It should be tattooed on every Mexican's forehead. Mexico is the land of the 'tomorrow.' The lawyers in that country are 'manana' lawyers, the judge is a 'manana' judge, and everything is 'manana.'"

At last she was officially permitted to visit her brother. "At first he was in a cell only thirty-nine inches square," said Miss Josephine yesterday. "He couldn't lie down when he slept, but had to sit and doze, while the rats ran over him. The food was wretched. He was a wreck. After a while Judge Cabrera permitted me to carry a telegram a day to the prisoner. Zenora was too slow and I retained Lawyer Malina. All I asked for was a trial."

"Justice moves like a funeral procession in Mexico," Judge Cabrera said. "He would like to help me, but he didn't make any move and said at last that he was afraid nothing could be done. I told him that if he didn't do something I would go to the American Ambassador at Mexico City. And I went. On March 21st, when I had arranged with the American Ambassador for an interview with President Diaz in Mexico City, I received a telegram that my brother had been released from prison. My persistence and the prodding by the Department of State from Washington had forced the authorities to move."

There Was No Robbery

"They sent for Rodriguez. At first he admitted he was not sure my brother had robbed him. Then he said the robbery, and finally he confessed that he had not been robbed at all."

Miss Shilling wanted her brother to come home with her, but he believes that he has a good case against the Government in damages and he stayed to look after that."

"You ought to have seen the hotel I stayed at," said Miss Shilling. "It was the Hotel Regent in Washington. It was the best hotel in the city. The food was so bad that I could hardly eat it."

"When my brother comes back to the United States he will never return to Mexico."

Stole Bridegroom at Door of New Home

NEW YORK, April 27.—It wasn't George Voness's fault that he spent the very first night of his wedded life away from home, setting them up for the boys. The boys kidnapped him as he was about to usher his bride of two hours into the new house he had built for her at No. 5617 Thirteenth avenue in the Borough Park section of Brooklyn.

The bride was Miss Ida Whitaker, of No. 106 East Tenth street, Manhattan. Voness is a lithographer. They were married Thursday evening at Miss Whitaker's home and after a supper and reception left in a taxicab for the new home in Brooklyn.

When Voness got out in front of the house and was about to help his bride to alight he was seized from behind by two masked men, tied hand and foot and thrown into a touring car that was standing at the curb. The key to his house was taken from him and passed to the frightened young woman in the taxicab with the comforting advice that she had better go right in and make herself comfortable till her husband came home. She was also assured that he would not be harmed.

Then the kidnappers jumped into their own car and whizzed off with the bridegroom. They kept whizzing until they got to a hotel in Halesville, L. I. island, where Voness was taken for the rest of the night and the next morning would expect him to be there as they were both hungry and thirsty after their long ride.

When they got the victim at the head of the table, which had been identified by Voness in advance, they revealed their counterfeits, disclosing the smiling faces of George Tremblay, of No. 5507 Thirtieth avenue, and John Donnelly, of No. 123 Fifty-fourth street, Brooklyn, two friends of the bridegroom.

Voness made the best of it as there was no way of getting back to Halesville until morning except by the car which he had been taken away in, and that was not available. So after being allowed to telephone the father of his plight to the new Mrs. Voness, he gave a supplementary wedding supper, at which there was no bride and where prizes were served in place of wedding cake.

Voness got home yesterday noon.

Scandalized Women Resent FALSE REPORT

Feminine Workers in Public Printery Not Maligned by Women's Federation

WASHINGTON, April 27.—Women employed in the Bureau of Engraving and Printing here stormed the heads of the National Civic Federation of Women, the Secretary of the Treasury and a Washington newspaper office today. The cause was the printed statement that the Civic Federation would bring about the dismissal of fifty women employees, if possible, on the charge of immorality. Two weeks ago the Civic Federation held a meeting here and announced the discovery that the lot of women employed in this Government bureau was a hard one. It was resolved to do what was possible for the girls who worked as helpers to the plate printers and those in other divisions. One of the plans was to give receptions in the best homes of Washington to these women workers. According to the report published in the morning, the Federation, on investigation, found that at least fifty of the employees could not be admired.

Director Ralph, of the bureau, received a delegation as soon as he reached his desk this morning. The women were determined to defend themselves, and the director was in accord with them. He directed that no person in each division be excused for the day to carry out the plans of defense.

"Twenty-five women, headed by George P. Foster, chairman of the Executive Board of Plate Printers, called on the editor of a Washington newspaper that had copied the article from a New York paper, and received immediate assurance that he would print anything that the women wished to say in their own behalf."

The committee then went to the Secretary of the Treasury, Mr. Foster, on behalf of the women, told the Secretary that 2500 women had been placed under suspicion by the printed report after sixteen years' work in a department he wished to say that for morality, right living and intelligence the women employed in the department would rank with the best women in society.

The Secretary of the Treasury answered that he was glad the committee had called on him, as he wished to assure the women of the bureau that he had placed no credence in the published report, and also that he wished to assure them that he would be behind them in any steps that they took for their vindication.

The committee of women called on Mrs. Samuel Spencer. Mrs. Spencer is the widow of the late president of the Southern Railroad, and is chairman of the Welfare Committee of the Civic Federation of Women. She told the committee that the Federation had not taken any such action as had been asserted.

"It is entirely false," said Mrs. Spencer. "No one, officially or unofficially, connected with our organization has cast any reflection on the morals of the women in the Bureau of Engraving and Printing. Our investigations have not been on that subject. We have looked only into the wage scales and the sanitary arrangement of the building."

To Eyes and Lips

Here's to your eyes, sweetheart,
Here's to your eyes!
Many a man has lost his way,
Many a good man's gone astray,
Following, following, all the day—
Some woman's eyes.

Here's to your lips, sweetheart,
Here's to your lips!
What if a man should die unshriven,
Unrepentant and unforgiven,
His dream of bliss is two links riven—
Some woman's lips.

Louise Winter.

Bleached Blonde's Kisses Will Cause Pyorrhoea

BIRMINGHAM, April 27.—When the subject of pyorrhoea, a disease of the gums, came up for discussion here at the thirteenth annual convention of the National Dentists' Association, some members declared this trouble is more prevalent among women whose hair is made blonde by artificial means than in any other class of people. The statement was made that nearly every woman whose hair is artificially colored is a victim of this trouble. It is also commensurate by kissing.

An international movement for a permanent memorial to the late Dr. Miller, who discovered the reasons for tooth decay and prepared plans for treating them, is advocated by the convention.

THINE EYES

The vague and mistal beauty of thine eyes
Recalls the splendor of some Cuban night,
Where tropic storms, pulsing with golden light,
Hurl dizzy flashes through dark voids of skies!

The trustful look of sweet Actaea lies
Within their merry depths, that lure and smite
The souls of men who scorn all woman's might,
And, seeing them, marvel in supreme surprise.
Ah! when those eyes before me burn and shine
In soft perfection, I can understand
White Aphrodite's glance half blurred by foam,
And how Cleopatra, pearl-crowned and divine,
Gazed upon Antony in her passion grand,
When for her sake he spurned imperial Rome!
